During Winnipeg's Rotary World Peace Week 2013, the IIWR-Mb is pleased to host Women's Pathways to Peace to acknowledge what women are doing locally and globally to make our world a more peaceful place.

War and conflict continue to be a key source of gender-based violence, and have grave consequences for the safety and security of society as a whole, including women, children, and men.

Locally, and according to Canadian government statistics, Indigenous women are five to seven times more likely than other women to die as the result of violence here in Canada.

Moderator:

IIWR-Mb co-chair: Prof. Marilou McPhedran, University of Winnipeg Global College

Presenters:

Chief Francis Meeches – Chief of Swan Lake First Nations

Staff Sergeant Gay Jones – Brandon Police Service veteran

Nadia Mahmood – former Humanitarian Aid Worker in Afghanistan, the Democratic Republic of Congo and Pakistan
